A BIG CITY HALL.

HOW IT WILL LOOK WHEN FINISHED.

The Work of Building the Extension to be Commenced Soon-The Plans Prepared by Architect Clark - Fire-Proof Court and File-Rooms.

For years the City Hall building has been a hollow mockery. Surmounting an emi-nence overlooking one of the broadest and finest thoroughfares in the District, it occupies a commanding position. From the southern end of Four-and-a-half street, whence only the central portico of the building, with its classic columns and triangular pediment, can be seen in the distance, the building reminds one of some temple rowning a Grecian hill. If the visitor has a particularly well-cultivated imagination he might persuade himself that he was standing on the broad-walled avenue leading to Piræus and gazing porthward upon the splendors of the Athenian Acropolis, Lot Flannery's statue of Old Abe standing for the colossal gold-tipped figure of Minerva, which used to beekon the well-freighted whiteturns into a musty-looking yellow, and one is more likely to compare the building with a country court-house than a grand temple. Stuccowork, white-wash, and other architectural cosmetics have been used plentifully to give the building an appearance of some imposing edifice of of the vanity of the world. There are few men and few things that do not suffer, in our estimation, upon close acquaintance; but probably there is no case where the transition from admiration to pity s so sudden as in the case of the City Hall. These observations refer only to the front or southern elevation of the building. How one's contempt is intensified when he makes a circuit of the pretentions building and discovers that it was chopped off short before it was half completed, the northern front being but a flat, blank wall of brick, looking as dismal and cheeriess as the back wall of a jail! Probably this building would remain as it is now for many years to come had not the CROWING BUSINESS of the blind goddess, who has much to do in this District to settle the disputes of citizens and punish offenders against the law, required more room. Even as it is, the court in general term has, during part of the time lately, had to occupy quarters outside of the building. The court representing the highest legal authority in the District has been orced to share the lodgings of the students who are just struggling with the first principles of the grand system of law and equity, whose majesty is so well represented in our Supreme Court. The grave question of providing additional room for our District court, which is divided up into six different sections, for each of which a chamber is required, was submitted to Congress at its recent session. Congress appropriated $117,000 for building an extension to, or rather completing, the City Hall. Architect Clark, of the Capitol, was intrusted with the work, subject to the approval of ished his plans some time ago, and they were approved by the Secretary of the Interior on the 14th nstant. Then a question arose as to whether it would not be necessary to submit the plans, as in case of other Federal buildings, for the inspection and approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Attorney-General. It has been decided that in this case, as the act of appropriation specifically states under whose super-Tyler & Chewning, vision the extension shall be constructed, the approval of the officers named is not required. So yesterday the architect received authority from the Secretary of the Interior to proceed with the work. It should be here stated that the plans originally made by Architect Clark for the proposed extension were made last summer, at a time when iron and other material to be used in the A LARGE STOCK OF SILK-FRINGE AND construction were cheaper than at present. Hence PLAIN IMPORTED AND DOMESTIC EASTER it has become necessary to modify the original plan by omitting the cellaring, and by other Louis. means, so as to bring the cost of construction Shillington's Book Store, within the appropriation. The Secretary of the Interior has decided that the cost should not execed the appropriation; or, in other words, the appropriation was not to be considered as merely ported a contribution toward the cost, to be supplemented by additional appropriations in the future, as has been the case in respect to other buildings. PLAN OF THE EXTENSION.

The plans made by architect Clark do not contemplate a completion of the building according to the original plans. The City Hall, which was planned by Mr. George Hadfield and commenced in 1820, was intended to be occupied by the municipal government and the United States Courts, and was so occupied until the Territorial form of government was introduced in the District. As it was intended to be a place for public assembly, it was designed that there should be a large rotunda in the centre. Since the building has been [diverted from its original purposes and given up entirely to the courts, and the only object to be secured in building to the north, the height and general height and style of the present structure. The extension will of course be of the same length from east to west as the present building-247 feet 63 feet 3 inches, making the entire depth of the building north and south about 220 feet. This extension, when completed, will add

A glance into the F. Nye, Martinsburg, W. Va.; William M. Stewart, jr., envelope showed that he had been grossly swindled by his good friend. It contained what detectives call a "boodle"-a roll of valueless paper. Woeful Mr. Copeland took out the several pieces of newspaper, and down at the bottom found a sealed note, on the back of which were written the words, " My friend, please read the inclosed slip and profit by it." Mr. Copeland mechanically opened the envelope, and found a cutting from a St. Louis paper. It told of the misfortunes of a green Missouri preacher who had fallen into the hands of 'bunko" men and left town $124 poorer than he entered it. This was the comfort that Mr. Copeland found in the note. Thus he was informed spected by the Health Office last week 225 bushels | that he was not the only man who had suffered,
